A TRIP TO THE PACIFIC COAST

Graphically Described by Richard L. Templin Who Is a Close Observer.

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 8, 1915. Editor Dispatch:—I believe I prom- land and were told that it has been ed to write an occasional letter to adopted as the official rose of the city. sed to write an occasional letter to your readers while on our western myself to the climate here I have con tracted a severe cold, and my wife says I must stay in our room today and let her doctor me. I will kill the time by jotting down some conclusions derived from personal observations and conversation with others.

In the first place, to convince your readers that I have not yet contracted the western fever, I want to say that after traveling through twelve states and provinces, I have seen nothing from a farmer's viewpoint that quite equals old Ohio in the uniformly good crops comfortable homes and other evidences of thrift and progress,

We left our home in Cleveland July and pleasant trip so far. We found unusually wet weather all the way small through Wisconsin, Minnesota far as you can see, with mountain and North Dakota. My father used ranges 40 to 50 miles distant on both

The I do not know whether they arrived grain is cut, threshed and delivered in remember seeing three different broods. I have no definite data but from other incidents that course. ing locust years I would say that they are not due before 1916 or 1917. But this is digressing. We came over the Canadian Pacific route to Vancouver. We had been told that it contained the most beautiful mountain scenery. We stopped over three nights in crossing the mountains in order to miss nothing of interest. Some of the scenery was grand beyond description. Lake Louise was exceptionally fine, the natural setting of mountains, lake, glaciers, and snow covered Mt. Victoria probably having no equal in all Europe. There is, however, this difference in the mountain scenery of Switzerland and northern Italy. Being in a much warmer latitude the valleys are all under high cultivation, the mountain sides covered with vineyards with here and there pretty little villages and villas, giving a pleasing effect nowhere seen in America. I was disappointed in the general conditon of the country through Saskachawan, and Alberta provinces, as expected to see vast wheat fields evrywhere along the line. On the con trary a large per cent of the country is virgin prairie with no improve ments whatever. On inquiry I learn ed that much of the land along the railroad is held by speculators. There were, however, three or four large grain elevators at every little village along the line, evidence that there was large quantities of grain grown farther back from the railroad.

Your many temperance readers will pleased to learn that they were just closing a redhot prohibition fight the day we passed through the Province of Alberta. The election was held the next day, resulting in a 3 to 2 victory for prohibition-another cog in the temperance steam roller that is slowly but surely crushing out the damnable saloon business. Ohio will be the next state that will fall in line. One thing that impresses the "Easterner" on his first trip to the coast is the remarkable fertility of the soil in the valleys between the mountains as evidenced by the wonderful vegetation seen on every hand. Your readers will remember my description of the fertility of the soil in Italy last summer. The same is true here in the west, the soil doubtless being of the same volcanic origin. We followed the course of the Frazier River for a half day or more before arriving at Vancouver, containing many fine orchards and berry ranches, and again between Seattle and Tacoma are many emarkably fine orchards, with raspberries, loganberries and blackberries growing to perfection between

We could see no resemblance in the present business section, as the hills near the water front have all been leveled down and the ground covered with splendid business blocks. To my mind Portland is a much more desirable city to live in called the Rose City and rightly nam-We spent three days there, one Co day on an excursion boat up the lumbia river to the Dalles. I was disappointed in this trip as I expected to see farms and villages all along river. On the contrary the mountains come down to the water's edge all the way with only a few boat landings, the towns evidently being some alstance back. We would have stopped over one day at Rood River where famous apples are grown but it being Saturday we were told that no excur sion boats ran so far up the river or Sunday. Contrary to my expectations there seems to be very few freight boats carrying produce up and down the river. A word now about roses. Twenty

From Portland south we followed By changing clothing to adjust the valley of the Willamette River of to the climate here I have con (pronounced Wil-lam-et with accent on "lam") more than half way across te state. This is one of the most desirable sections in the state, abounding in fertile, level farm lands, with waving fields of grain as far as you can see. Farther south as the valley becomes higher and more narrow are many fine orchards. In fact fruit growing is so much in evidence through the west that I believe I will later write a letter on the subject exclusively. As there are many facts connected with the business that I be lieve will make interesting reading.

Southern Oregon and northern California are quite mountainous, with 14th and have had a very interesting Mount Shasta and other snow-capped mountains in almost constant view For more than 200 miles we followed through the states, with backward the Sacramento river valley, which crops, especially corn, which was very gradually widened into vast plains as to say that if corn was knee high on sides. It was uncomfortably warm, the 4th of July it would make a good the thermometer registering 106 in crop, but the most of the corn was the shade from noon to 5 p. m.
